

EPA Administrator Regan: Expand the Safer Choice Program!
Re: EPA-HQ-OPPT-2023-0311 FRL-11016-01-OCSP

The Safer Choice program has been successful at allowing consumers, at a glance, to know that the household cleaning products they are purchasing are safer. Expanding this program to beauty and personal care products will help protect families and our environment, especially people of color who are disproportionately exposed to chemicals from these products. Too often, the chemicals in these products are obscured or purposefully difficult to understand. A clear, trustworthy label that lets us know which products are truly safer is essential.

The EPA should expand the Safer Choice program to more product categories, especially to beauty and personal care products. It will help consumers make better choices for our families and the environment and help safeguard us from harmful chemicals like PFAS.

The undersigned individuals have signed a petition in support:

Administrator Regan, expand Safer Choice today!

EPA Administrator Regan: Expand the Safer Choice Program! Re: EPA-HQ-OPPT-2023-0311 FRL-11016-01-OCSP The Safer Choice program has been successful at allowing consumers, at a glance, to know that the household cleaning products they are purchasing are safer. Expanding this program to beauty and personal care products will help protect families and our environment, especially people of color who are disproportionately exposed to chemicals from these products. Too often, the chemicals in these products are obscured or purposefully difficult to understand. A clear, trustworthy label that lets us know which products are truly safer is essential. The EPA should expand the Safer Choice program to more product categories, especially to beauty and personal care products. It will help consumers make better choices for our families and the environment and help safeguard us from harmful chemicals like PFAS.

Cosmetics and personal care products have been shown to adversely affect teenage hormones, particularly in females. A clear, forthright, trustworthy label at least provides consumers to choose products that are right for them. May you do ONLY that which is truly best for the environment and the vast majority of people living in America as well as in its Indigenous peoples and Tribal lands, its territories and its possessions, and cause those people as little harm as humanly possible. Thank you for reading my petition and prayer.

We need significant improvements in consumer product safety and communication. Consumers in America believe that if it's for sale, it's totally safe and that the American government is fully vouching for it. That is just not true. Lobbyists and industry have undermined the effectiveness of US regulatory agencies to the point of negligence. Products contain thousands of untested chemicals, many of which are banned and restricted in other countries. American life expectancy is tanking, our population is obese and unhealthy, and we are letting COVID rip despite thousands of studies showing grave concerns for organ damage and long term health impacts. The burden of toxic exposure on top of this significant new increment introduced by SARS2 does not bode well for American health. This will be even more stark if SARS2 does indeed turn out to be oncogenic and/or accelerating exciting cancers or predispositions to cancer. We need better labeling and more stringent consumer protections.

It's imperative that the US starts regulating our household cleaning and personal care beauty items to prevent cancer, infertility, and all health problems caused by these toxic chemicals. I am a US citizen and a Chicago resident. I am a mother and a retired clinical social worker who worked for decades in healthcare. I fear our children and all living creatures are being deprived of a healthy future due to exposure to multiple sources of toxic pollution. One of the many sources of toxic pollution is the chemicals from beauty and personal care products. Too often, the chemicals in these products are obscured or purposefully difficult to understand. A clear, trustworthy label that lets us know which products are truly safer is essential. Families have a right to know what harmful chemicals are in any product used in the home that have serious health risks to children, adults and our pets equally as well. If the corporations can't agree to label all ingredients then it's time to boycott them all who refuse to comply with health and safety first. Stand for safety for all first, Just Label All Ingredients and lets make it the law of our land across the USA . Sincerely ,

We need to have a label that lets us know our beauty and health products are safe. The average person does not know the difference between a safe ingredient or one that comes with health risks, particularly when used over a lifetime and with other questionable products. It is the least the FDA can do- if the administration cant outright ban ingredients like they do in the EU without tremendous blow back from the cosmetic and fragrance industry lobbyists and subsequently congress, then the US needs a label for people to easily identify 'clean' products. It is so important it's easy for people to quickly understand what's safe. No one should ever have to worry if their beauty products are hurting them- we all have so many other things to think about. This should not be a thing we have to watch out for- but we do- so why not make a simple identifier, like an official seal, for the US population to know what is truly safe to use.

I was using a shampoo that had a chemical in that turned to the carcinogen formaldehyde once it combined with water. It had a name that led you to believe it was organic and promoted for improving thinning hair. I was using it because my hair was thinning after having breast cancer twice. We definitely need to BAN toxic chemicals ~ It's so disturbing to see people getting sick due to the toxic chemicals that they put on there bodies, consume, breathe. Mother Earth is getting sick and mad that is why she is lashing out with our climate, hurricanes, tornados, etc. If we BAN the toxins perhaps we can save/heal mother earth and every one else on the planet as well as the animals, bird life, water creatures, etc. We can all make a difference!

I'm really surprised at how many chemicals are in my workout clothes and in all of my cleaning products and cosmetics. I was pretty disappointed to find out my age-old ivory soap is toxic. Perhaps this explains why I've been sick for years on and off and was not able to have a child. I would really like America to start advocating for me, the tax paying citizen. EPA you need to outlaw these chemicals. I'd like to be able to buy a couch and not worry about off gassing.

Communities that have been already contaminated by PFAS have been told to further avoid exposure to them (even by EPA). It is IMPOSSIBLE to abide by sound advice from the likes of CDC/ATSDR and physicians if these toxins aren't labeled on products. We have zero chance of lowering the continued bioaccumulation of PFAS if this is not done. ZERO. We shouldn't have to rely on individually and arduously searching out information from a few independent testers to find out what products PFAS are in (or know that we have to). You already know they are in countless products. Help us by making it easier.

The Safer Choice program has been successful at allowing consumers, at a glance, to know that the household cleaning products they are purchasing are safer. Expanding this program to beauty and personal care products will help protect families and our environment, especially people of color who are disproportionately exposed to chemicals from these products. Too often, the chemicals in these products are obscured or purposefully difficult to understand. A clear, trustworthy label that lets us know which products are truly safer is essential. The EPA should expand the Safer Choice program to more product categories, especially to beauty and personal care products. It will help consumers make better choices for our families and the environment and help safeguard us from harmful chemicals like PFAS.

Hello. The safer choice program is amazing. Thanks for getting this going. It would be amazing to see the Safer Choice program expanded in to the beauty products sector. I have a daughter who is just beginning to venture into the world of cosmetics. It pains me to tell her that certain products in which she has expressed interests are toxic. Currently when I buy beauty and personal care products I'm extremely leery of any products outside of a couple trusted higher price brands. If you could expand the safer choice programs labeling to personal care and beauty products, I would be able to make informed and easier decisions in which products to buy for my family. Currently on a vast number of personal care or beauty products I need to go ingredient by ingredient in the complicated ingredient list of each product and enter those into the environmental working group website! That's the only way that I can tell if an ingredient might be a good choice for my family. The Safer Choice program, if expanded to personal care and beauty products would make it so much easier for me to be an informed consumer when shopping. I could therefore probably buy a more varied and economical selection of products because I would know that they were safe.

The Safer Choice program is a much needed advance in consumer protection from harmful chemicals, but it is much too narrow. Beyond household cleaning products, the cosmetics industry has an equally urgent need to inform consumers about the toxic ingredients that are often used to make cosmetics. Expanding the Safer Choice program to cosmetics would give my daughter the tools to know which cosmetics come with these risks so that she can avoid them without doing research that she is doesn't have the resources to perform herself.

We were better at one time. Through the years, everything has been done quicker, easier, cheaper, at the cost of the environment. We need to think of ways to reverse this trend, & help the earth & thus everyone else in the long run. Don't forget about cutting back our carbon footprint. (and all that entails, including reduce, refuse, reuse, recycle, compost—when you can safely, & living as simply as possible, cutting back on excess, downsizing, etc . . .). I'm trying, but I think we could do more to encourage others around the world. Including setting a good example ourselves. I'm not sure Trump did the wrong thing. I was not in favor of the Paris Agreement for my own reasons, and I am a tree hugger. I also love this planet & all in it. but the nuclear option could blow it for all of us. (making it worse than it could ever get—because nuclear energy is very dangerous) I sometimes wonder about people who are pushing for the nuclear option. Do they just not know the past

I suspect that all sorts of people write you saying that they are appalled by the many occasions that the EPA seems to turn its back on banning, regulating, or even on noticing the creation or releases of obviously damaging, toxic, biocidal, or deadly substances. I am one of them. As I see it, your agency has been created specifically to stop these dangerous substances from getting loose into our country and onto our earth, yet time after time you seem to be out to lunch, and perhaps even lunching with the very corporations or entities that are carelessly spreading these toxics around. PLEASE be absolutely and totally ruthless in your efforts to protect every single one of us and every miniscule bit of the world we totally depend on. That's what your agency exists to do, no matter who squawks about it or whose bottom line shrinks because of it.

Industry has been allowed to poison our water, air, food, and bodies through lax policing of toxic substances allowed into our homes and environment. It is outrageous that the uninformed consumer is given no clue that they are putting themselves and their families at risk by allowing toxins into their homes — toxins that should be banned in the first place. Give consumers a fair shot at protecting themselves by offering a classification of products that are safer and less toxic.
