

VICTORIES IN 2022

We've secured commitments from 25 major retailers to reduce and eliminate PFAS in food packaging, representing more than 185,000 stores throughout the world, including Burger King, Starbucks, and Popeyes.

We won the first bipartisan vote to ban PFAS in food packaging nationwide in a key U.S. Senate committee.

Since we launched our Mind the Store program, Walmart has worked with its suppliers to eliminate 37 million pounds of toxic chemicals from cosmetics, personal care products, household cleaners, and formulated baby care products in the U.S.

Our work on the Safer Products law is driving solutions that protect people and wildlife from the most hazardous chemicals in 10 product categories— from electronics to food containers.

We tested hundreds of consumer products for PFAS, lead, and other chemicals, including clothing, housewares, cosmetics, toys, jewelry, and building materials.

As a result of our work, Best Buy became the first retailer in North America to commit to use safer flame retardants in their TVs.

We published a major study that found PFAS in most stain- and water-resistant products, which reached hundreds of millions of people nationwide and influenced policies in California and Washington.

We've mobilized more than 130,000 people to join us in urging popular outdoor retailer REI to ban PFAS this year.

AND IN WASHINGTON STATE:

- We won major policy to protect Washington families from toxic PFAS and spurred action in 11 other states.
- We secured $266,000 to test personal care products and cosmetics in Washington state for harmful chemicals.
- We helped secure Washington state's PFAS drinking water standards, protecting nearly 6 million people statewide.
